The book reviews pedagogical approaches to genre through English for Specific Purposes and Systemic Functional Linguistics to present a synthesis of the current research being undertaken in the field. From this theoretical base, Ian Bruce proposes a new model of genre-based approaches to academic writing, and analyses the ways in which this can be implemented in pedagogy and curriculum design. Academic Writing and Genre is a

The contributors are experts in the field and they cover both novice and expert examples of EAP. The book ends with an afterword that provides an agenda-setting closing perspective on the future of EAP research. It will appeal to reserachers and postgrduates in applied linguistics, corpus linguistics, discourse analysis and EAP.

International Student Security Simon Marginson,Chris Nyland,Erlenawati Sawir,Helen Forbes-Mewett,2010-07-29 More than three million students globally are on the move each year, crossing borders for their tertiary education. Many travel from Asia and Africa to English speaking countries, led by the United States, including the UK, Australia and New Zealand where students pay tuition fees at commercial rates and prop up an education export sector that has become lucrative for the provider nations. But the 'no frills' commercial form of tertiary education, designed to minimise costs and maximise revenues, leaves many international students inadequately protected and less than satisfied. International Student Security draws on a close study of international students in Australia, and exposes opportunity, difficulty, danger and courage on a massive scale in the global student market. It works through many unresolved issues confronting students and their families, including personal safety, language proficiency, finances, sub-standard housing, loneliness and racism.

Chinese Dream Anna Lee,2023-12-18 Chinese Dream describes the journey of Simon Mickleham who accepts a teaching job in Pingjiang, a fictional city in the south of China in 2013. It is the beginning of Xi Jinping's reign and the locals are full of optimism as China has opened up and become more tolerant and wealthier. Simon enters the society finding the manners of the locals delightful and begins to learn the language. English Corner, teaching, relationships, and his rapidly improving Chinese offer him insight into a culture and society that slowly reveals itself as his personal relationships become deeper. Over time Simon encounters a dysfunctional education system and increasing visa restrictions and censorship, but eventually buys a training centre, marries, and has children, tying him to the country. By 2016, the first cracks in international relations appear, and over the following years steadily deteriorate. Society becomes less tolerant and foreigners begin to fear being arrested in retaliation for disputes with their home country. They retreat into their private lives, daring not to publicly express their views. Simon's very different upbringing brings him into conflict with his partner as they struggle to reconcile their different cultural backgrounds and world views. Soon foreigners leave country in droves and the salaries of foreign teachers increase dramatically, while the economy begins to tank under the weight of an oversupply of housing and conflicts with trading partners. Then the Covid-19 pandemic strikes... and the hostilities really begin. Chinese Dream offers a comprehensive and sensitive view of the changes that have occurred in China between 2013 and 2023. It is a modern historical novel as it is set against a backdrop of a well researched and historically accurate timeline.

Sociocultural and Power-Relational Dimensions of Multilingual Writing Amir Kalan, 2021-05-14 This book examines the writing practices of three adult multilingual writers through the prism of their writing in English as an additional language. It illustrates some of the social, cultural and political contexts of the writers' literacy activities and discusses how these impact their literate and intellectual lives. It reflects on the para- and meta-textual dimensions of writing because organic writing practices are almost always performed within sociocultural and power-relational contexts. In our highly compartmentalized educational structures, writing education has been severed from those organic components, focusing mainly on writing stylistics. This book proposes creating space for organic writing practices in our everyday writing pedagogies, and argues for a writing pedagogy that acknowledges the complex interactions of social, emotional and identity-related layers of writing.

Language, Culture, and Education in an Internationalizing University Kumari Beck, Roumiana Ilieva, 2024-07-25 This book offers a multi-dimensional analysis of the experiences of faculty, students, and staff at a Canadian university that emphasizes international education, providing an ethnographic lens for understanding globalization and internationalization of higher education on a wider, global scale. The collaborative work of multiple authors based in different departments and roles within the university offers a holistic picture of current international education policies and practices, and how they coalesce to shape the experiences of all affected stakeholders. The book focuses on questions of cultural difference and the development of intercultural capital and highlights engagement with English dominance, language matters and multilingualism in everyday experiences and pedagogical practices in the institution. The contributors address implications for attending to linguistic and cultural diversity in the policies and practices of an Anglo-dominant university that are applicable to similar contexts worldwide. As a self-study from a reputed university, the book provides valuable insights for higher education program leaders and decision makers to strategically rethink the value and quality of the internationalization activities they engage in, their scholarship and creative activities, and, above all, their commitment to ethical internationalization.
