The Light at the End John Skipp,Craig Spector,1986 The groundbreaking novel of new age horror from the masters of Splatterpunk, Skipp and Spector. A brutal killer is stalking New York City's underground--a killer the tabloids call the Subway Psycho. But what they're looking for isn't even human. His kind has ruled the night for centuries, and down in the tunnels, the night lasts forever.

On the Bottom Edward Ellsberg,2014-06-24 The man who led the salvage efforts to raise a sunken US Navy submarine recounts the mission in a tale "that will surely rank among the epics of the sea" (The Philadelphia Inquirer). The sinking of the submarine S-51 was one of the greatest tragedies in American naval history. Due to a miscommunication and subsequent collision between the sub and a passing steamship on a September night, the S-51, including thirty-three of its crew of thirty-six, sank to the ocean depths. The tragedy of the S-51 captivated the nation, and was a fixture in the pages of American newspapers. The story took on a whole new dimension when the navy decided to take over the salvage of the thousand-ton behemoth from a civilian company. Heading the crew tasked with this impossible feat was Edward Ellsberg, at the time a lieutenant commander. On the Bottom is Ellsberg's account of the successes and failures he and his men experienced as they attempted an astonishing feat of engineering and bravery: the first salvage of a submarine from the open ocean.
