Objetivo 2030. Energía, cambio climático y tecnología en el ámbito local Rafael Álvarez García,Pedro de Grado Sanz,2022-09-27 El cambio climático es ya una realidad indiscutible. El consumo de energía y recursos naturales por el hombre es mucho mayor que la capacidad de regeneración de los ecosistemas naturales. La posibilidad más realista de restitución efectiva del orden climático preindustrial, pasa necesariamente por la aplicación práctica y efectiva de la nueva tecnología y la innovación, mucho más sostenible. También con el cambio de modelo energético hacia la descarbonización, con alternativas energéticas renovables revolucionarias, con la gestión y planificación inteligente de la producción de los residuos, el uso del agua, con ciudades sostenibles en sus servicios públicos, y mucho más adaptadas y resilientes. Esta publicación expone casi 700 medidas tecnológicas y propone más de 70 proyectos de innovación de posible aplicación directa en nuestras ciudades y que facilitarían alcanzar en buena medida los Objetivos de Desarrollo Sostenible para el año 2030. Con estas acciones tecnológicas, el cambio de modelo energético y de consumo de recursos naturales es posible en nuestra sociedad, y compatible en gran medida con el paradigma urbano vital actual. La obra puede ser un referente de consulta tanto en los ámbitos técnicos (sector público, consultoras...), así como en el ámbito educativo (universidad, formación profesional o bachillerato).
