Edward William Lane

End of the Journey J. KRISHNAMURTI, This book of dialogues with Krishnamurti addresses the main, or perhaps the only, question being asked by those who have listened to him for several years: 'Why has the teachings not brought about a radical change in my life? Has the end of my journey come about? If not, why?' Asserting that nothing else matters in life except this and at the same time refusing to give ready-made answers, he urges his listeners to find the answer for themselves. Deny thought, he says and explains what he means by it: 'Deny any movement of thought to reach beyond itself and go further than its own consciousness. That's all; that's all. To realize that is to realize something extraordinary.' Consisting of discussions with small groups, held in India between 1965 and 1984, the book turns on this theme, which is stated in different words and in different contexts by various participants or by Krishnamurti himself. What these selections reveal is not just Krishnamurti's answers to the questions posed by the participants, but the methodology of his dialogue itself. It is hoped that those who, over the years, have gone deeply into his teachings will find the dialogues of special significance in their own journey.

the social construction of female sexuality, reproductive and marital arrangements). Authors include Jerome Shaffer, Sandra Harding, Michael Ruse, Richard Mohr, Russell Vannoy, Claudia Card, M.C. Dillon, Gene Fendt, Steven Emmanuel, T.F. Morris, Timo Airaksinen, and Sylvia Walsh.
