Raffaela Di Napoli

content-based image retrieval (CBIR) is a research area in the field of artificial intelligence (AI) that focuses on retrieving images from a large database based on their visual content. The term "content" in this context refers to the visual information contained within an image, such as its color, shape, and texture. The term "art" in the title "What Is The Content In Art" refers to the artistic nature of the images being retrieved. The book "What Is The Content In Art" by Raffaela Di Napoli is a comprehensive guide to the field of CBIR, covering the latest research and applications. The book is divided into two main parts: the first part covers the fundamentals of CBIR, including the different types of image retrieval systems and the various techniques used to extract visual features from images. The second part covers the applications of CBIR in various domains, such as image classification, image search, and image recommendation. The book is written in a clear and concise style, making it accessible to both researchers and practitioners in the field. The book is a valuable resource for anyone interested in the field of CBIR and its applications in art and image retrieval.
