A Sense of Tumour Barbara Connolly,2000

All the Wild Hungers Karen Babine,2019-01-08 A “lovely” memoir of caring for a mother with cancer, reflecting on our appetites for food and for life (Minneapolis Star Tribune). When her mother is diagnosed with a rare cancer, Karen Babine—cook, collector of vintage cast iron, and fiercely devoted daughter, sister, and aunt—can’t help but wonder: feed a fever, starve a cold, but what do we do for cancer? And so she commits to preparing her mother anything she will eat, a vegetarian diving into the unfamiliar world of bone broth and pot roast. In this series of mini-essays, Babine ponders the intimate connections between food, family, and illness. As she notes that her sister’s unborn baby is the size of lemon while her mother’s tumor is the size of a cabbage, she reflects on what draws us toward food metaphors to describe disease. What is the power of language, of naming, in a medical culture where patients are too often made invisible? How do we seek meaning where none is to be found—and can we create it from scratch? And how, Babine asks as she bakes cookies with her small niece and nephew, does a family create its own food culture across generations? Generous and bittersweet, All the Wild Hungers is an affecting chronicle of one family’s experience of illness and of a writer’s culinary attempt to make sense of the inexplicable. “[Babine] continues to navigate her way through extraordinary challenges with ordinary comforts, finding poetry in the everyday. Reading this quiet book should provide the sort of balm for those in similar circumstances that writing it must have for the author.”—Kirkus Reviews “Profound...Anyone who has experienced a family member’s struggle with cancer will be stabbed by recognition throughout this book...In the end, the overriding hunger referred to in this lovely book’s title is the hunger for life.”—Minneapolis Star Tribune

The Cancer Season Kathleen Sassaman Goolsby,2023-01-19 What should you say or not say to someone who has cancer?

How should family and friends act around a patient to be supportive? How can the patient cope with a life-threatening disease? Cancer changes the lives of the patient, family, and friends-often for decades. Most people are totally unprepared for what to expect and how to cope when cancer invades. The physical changes and hardships are daunting, and the emotional impact dramatically alters life for everyone involved. How will the communications between the patient and loved ones and friends change? How can a patient cope with the fact that every personal relationship the patient has will change (and some may end) because of the cancer? The author shares the intimate story of her own battle with non-Hodgkin lymphoma and chronic lymphocytic leukemia and her chemotherapy journey as well as her experiences as a daughter of her mom who had breast cancer and her father who had prostate cancer and her experiences as a friend of several cancer patients. She shares advice on how to manage through cancer and the treatment to fight it so that you can avoid some of the trauma and frustration. You'll read insights about choosing an oncologist and how to determine whether to undergo chemotherapy treatment. You'll learn the most important element you must get right as you undergo treatment or as you help a loved one go through treatment. You'll learn how to deal with awkward situations where the patient or the family and friends just don't know how to share what they are going through. The author describes how cancer tosses people's emotions around like objects in a violent storm, and those emotions can become overwhelming at any moment. It is an agonizing time for everyone involved. She shares advice about having faith despite feeling fear and how important it is to find an anchor that will hold the patient or loved one in place in the storm. Mindset is crucial. Besides giving you insights for dealing with the traumas of cancer, this book will leave you feeling uplifted and encouraged.
