Covering a vast range of daily life—from homeowner organizations and the users of Internet cafes to self-directed professionals and informed consumers—the essays in Privatizing China create a compelling picture of the burgeoning awareness of self-governing within the postsocialist context. The introduction by Aihwa Ong and Li Zhang presents assemblage as a concept for studying China as a unique postsocialist society created through interactions with global forms. The authors conduct their ethnographic fieldwork in a spectrum of domains—family, community, real estate, business, taxation, politics, labor, health, professions, religion, and consumption—that are infiltrated by new techniques of the self and yet also regulated by broader socialist norms. Privatizing China gives readers a grounded, fine-grained intimacy with the variety and complexity of everyday conduct in China's turbulent transformation.

The Dynamics of Corporate Social Responsibilities Radu Mareş, 2008 This book proposes that the responsible business practices of leading companies are significant not only as isolated instances of self-regulation, but that they also contribute to a broader rule-making process which has been underway in the last decade and is aimed at making business more responsive to human rights and environmental concerns. The flexibility of existing laws as well as the emergence of new regulations relevant to corporate social responsibility (CSR) are highlighted. As CSR increasingly interacts with public policy, some insufficiently understood effects of CSR appear that can help us advance toward more systemic solutions in the business and human rights area. This study identifies variables that states can stimulate through a wide range of interventions ranging from capacity-building measures to policy to hard law so that responsible practices get diffused more broadly and deeply in the business community. The intended audiences are legal experts with an interest in enhancing the protection of human rights in developing countries, and CSR theorists and practitioners mindful of the broader social dynamics that surround the implementation of CSR commitments.

Capitalism at Risk, Updated and Expanded Joseph L. Bower, Herman B. Leonard, Lynn S. Paine, 2020-06-30 Q. Who should take the lead in fixing market capitalism? A. Business—not government alone. The spread of capitalism worldwide has made people wealthier than ever before. But capitalism's future is far from assured. Pandemics, income inequality, resource depletion, mass migrations from poor to rich countries, religious fundamentalism, the misuse of social media, and cyberattacks—these are just a few of the threats to continuing prosperity that we see dominating the headlines every day. How can capitalism be sustained? And who should spearhead the effort? Critics turn to government. In their groundbreaking book, Capitalism at Risk, Harvard Business School professors Joseph Bower, Herman Leonard, and Lynn Paine argue that while robust governments must play a role, leadership by business is essential. For enterprising companies—whether large multinationals, established regional players, or small startups—the current threats to market capitalism present important opportunities. In this updated and expanded edition of Capitalism at Risk, Bower, Leonard, and Paine set forth a renewed and more urgent call to action. With three additional chapters and a new preface, the authors explain how the eleven original disruptors of the global market system clash with the digital age, and they provide lessons on how to take action. Presenting examples of companies already making a difference, Bower, Leonard, and Paine show how business must serve both as innovator and activist—developing corporate strategies that effect change at the community, national, and international levels. Filled with rich insights, this new edition of Capitalism at Risk presents a compelling and constructive vision for the future of market capitalism.

Fighting brand counterfeiting in E-commerce Annika Kristin Baiker, 2007-08-02 Diploma Thesis from the year 2006 in the subject Business economics - Offline Marketing and Online Marketing, grade: 1,3, University of applied sciences, Neuss, language: English, abstract: [...] In the following first chapter of the study, a few basic remarks on brands and Ecommerce are first considered. In addition, the concept of brand and its functions are presented, followed by an overview of the development and use of eBusiness in general. After a brief description of the Nike brand in the second section, the following chapter provides a concrete account of brand and product piracy. Forms in which fake products appear, strategies of counterfeiters, causes and effects are explained. Particular emphasis is placed on the factor of the Internet and the effect of online auction houses as well as the problem of piracy for the Nike brand. [...] The fourth part presents possibilities and measures for fighting brand and product piracy. This includes, as a first step, becoming aware of the problem and recognizing the potential danger for a company. Following recognition of the problem of piracy, the second step is implementing suitable response measures. In addition to the legal situation and international approaches, measures for protecting the value added chain are discussed together with specifically adapted responses of different areas of companies such as Research and Development, Marketing, and Sales. Measures involving company strategies and policies are also considered. The last step deals with some concrete recommendations for how to deal with the problem from the point of view of Nike, which serves as a focus in developing methods for such areas as working together with government authorities, strengthening communication and security, and developing technological means of providing security. Finally, the fifth chapter of the study summarizes essential points and provides some recommendations. In addition to the need for more extensive legislation and greater efforts from companies to take legal steps – both certainly necessary – constant monitoring of the piracy situation must also be ensured, especially on the Internet. The development of effective communication activities as well as fine-tuning of distribution also promise much success in the fight against lost sales and damaged image.
